Canadian jazz-soul band Nick LaRiviere and the Best Laid Plans is all about the excitement. The band is well recognized for its fiery solos, superb musicianship, endearing songs, and honeyed vocals that greatly captivate its audience. The group released "Where We Go," a song from their latest album "Get Ready!" on July 15th of this year. La Riviere, the band's main vocalist, and a well-known trombonist are accompanied by six additional talented jazz musicians from the Victoria province that complete the band.

The song "Where We Go" by Nick LaRiviere and the Best Laid Plans has great vocals and deep melodies that will instantly make your day happier. It features easy-to-use components that add charm and make music sound wonderful. The words are given a unique appeal by the melodies made by the concise instruments, and the trombone creates a wonderful atmosphere that amazingly boosts the song's intensity.

The elegance of "Where We Go" ultimately is its greatest strength. It has the sense of a modern song that, when played, makes you feel at rest and introduces you to several delightful inner feelings that you have been skipping out. It is a song with beautiful vocals and lyrics, soulful melodies, and a very appealing feel that would quickly uplift your sentiment, particularly the followers of artists like Trombone Shorty, Galactic, The Preservation Hall Band, and The Soul Rebels, to name a few.

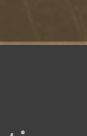

In terms of structure, "Where We Go" is fundamentally a well-produced record, and the easily swaying melodies bounce throughout the song. The transitions are seamless and undetectable as they go from one segment to the next.
